It was a miracle escape!

'It was like a second birth to come out of the flames that day,' says Romain Grosjean

YDT | Manama

Formula 1 driver Romain Grosjean feels like he has had "a second birth" following his life-changing ordeal at last Sunday's Gulf Air Bahrain Grand Prix, when he had a horrifying crash that resulted in a huge explosion and his car getting engulfed in flames.

Grosjean says his thoughts were with his family, especially his children, during his incredible escape, and he now looks forward to a full recovery as he continues to receive treatment at Bahrain Defence Force Hospital.

The Frenchman will miss this weekend's F1 Rolex Sakhar Grand Prix, but is hopeful to be able to return for the season-ending round in Abu Dhabi a few days later, which may be his last chance to compete in F1 as he has yet to secure a seat in the top flight for 2021 onwards.

Grosjean is visited by Royal Medical Services Commander Major-General Professor Shaikh Khalid bin Ali Al Khalifa and Burns Unit Chief Colonel Dr. Najef Abdulrahman Lari in hospital yesterday

Speaking for the first time about the incident to French broadcaster TF1, as shared by F1 on social media, Grosjean was quoted as saying: "I thought about a lot of things, including Niki Lauda, and I thought it wasn't possible to end up like that, not now. I couldn't finish my story in F1 like that. For my children, I told myself that I had to get out. "I see my visor turning all orange, I see the flames on the left side of the car. I put my hands in the fire, so clearly I felt it burning on the chassis."

ily and friends, obviously my children who are my greatest source of pride and energy, than for myself.

"I would say that there is a feeling of being happy to be alive, of seeing things differently. But also there is the need to get back in the car, if possible in Abu Dhabi, to finish my story with F1 in a different way.

"It was almost like a second birth. To come out of the flames that day is something that will mark my life forever."

Bahraini culture and Heritage

As National Day Approaches, we thought about sharing with you about Bahrain's traditional clothes and jewelry

From the book “Treasures of Bahrain” pictured above is a truly special Thoub which belonged to one of the most important members of the Al Khalifa Royal Family of Bahrain. This Thoub is called “Al Munabat.” The Munabat is usually embroidered with circles of Zari thread.

In this example the circles have been replaced with gold discs placed in the middle of Zari squares. Encircling the neck-line of the Munabat are gold pieces set with turquoise and other stones.

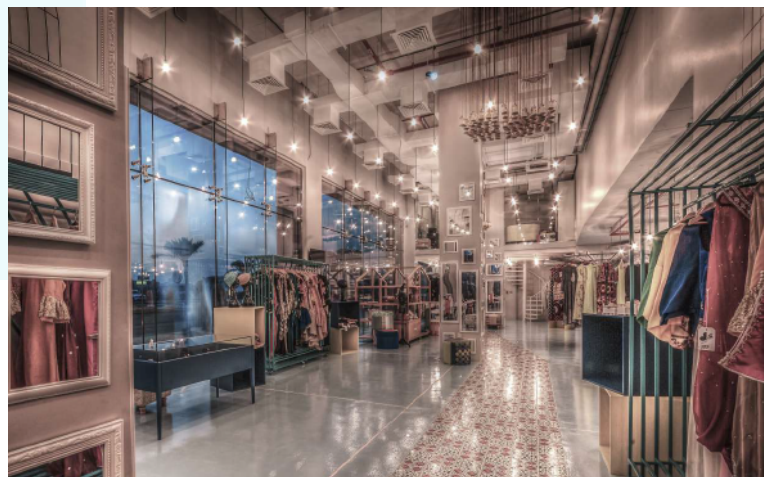

This Thoub was designed by its owner, May God rest her soul and she carefully and intricately chose its entire design and features.

Following the publication of this book, many tried replicating this special Thoub, however none have come close to this masterpiece as it is one of a kind and it cannot be completely replicated.

+973 ARTISANAT

Fostering Bahraini creativity and entrepreneurship

+973 Artisanat was founded as a creative space where young Bahraini entrepreneurs without the means to set up their own retail outlets could showcase their creations. The products on offer include paintings, sculptures, home furnishings and accessories, designer clothing, and cosmetics. Apart from the Kingdom's fashion and art enthusiasts, the showroom regularly receives tourists looking to take back a handcrafted Bahraini treasure with them. The gallery also features a café serving delicious Mediterranean cuisine.

+973 Artisanat assists novice entrepreneurs with all aspects of setting up and running a business, from establishing their brand and providing showroom space and sales staff, to support with marketing.

Since its inception in 2012, 118 entrepreneurs have 'graduated' from +973 Artisanat, going to establish their own showrooms successfully.

The showroom is located in Juffair and is open from 10 am to 10 pm from Saturday to Thursday. It is closed on Friday.
