Expo 2020 Dubai Starts on October 1st and the Bahrain Pavilion Is Breathtaking

Designed by architect Christian Kerez, the pavilion is made up of 87 dispersed columns, each less than two inches thick. The pavilion covers an area of 21,000-square-foot. Density Weaves Opportunities, the Kingdom of Bahrain's pavilion is an exploration of density as an enabler of opportunities through an intricate exploration of the dense natural and urban compositions of the island. The pavilion of the Kingdom of Bahrain is an immersive spatial and physical experience of density. The main exhibition component revolves around the act of weaving as a metaphor for density. The pavilion is conceived as a physical and spatial experience of density and the future possibilities of building in an increasingly dense world. Bahrain Is Gearing up for a Grand Welcome to 2022 and Were Excited Already!

Last year BTEA cancelled the fireworks show to support state efforts to combat the pandemic and avoid crowding in a confined space, and we believe it was the right move. This year however, with the population vaccinated and things getting back to normal, BTEA has announced the resumption of celebrations on New Year's Eve. Hence, BTEA has launched a tender and is seeking proposals from companies for an amazing fireworks show that'll lit up the Bahraini skies in all the colors of joy. Along with fireworks, other events and entertainment plans are also being considered. This is such a great news and we can't wait to see what's in store for New Year's Eve, this time around!
