Grade 7 students engaged in a microscope lab in their science class in connection with their unit on living organisms. Students were able to prepare their own samples of onion cells and cheek cells to view under the microscope. The aim of this lab was to allow students to observe cells for the first time, differentiate between cell types and identify internal structures. As they observed the cells, students drew scientific diagrams of what they saw, which they later had to label through research. Through this activity, students also learnt about the parts of the microscope, how to focus a microscope, and how to prepare a sample.

Grade 6 students used the facilities in our new library located at Zakat Al Elm to learn how to be responsible Digital Citizens. Students were also introduced to the importance of applying citation in research work. The students received some valuable insights about the topic and were able to practice citing resources from different online methods.
