NEW BEGINNINGS

Today's stories written by tomorrow's leaders... that is the slogan that the Bayan Post has created for the 2017-2018 Volume. That sentence encapsulates the main goal that this school letter has; allowing today's youth to retell current news (e.g. politics or entertainment) with their own perspectives and innovative ideas incorporated in their writing. As the new Editor-In-Chief, I am honoured to be entrusted with the responsibility to ensure that this goal is fulfilled, and hopefully by achieving this goal the Bahrain Bayan School will come together to form a tighter bond.

To accomplish this, I am initiating the first ever electronic newsletter to be introduced in the school. By doing this, the newsletter's readers will have easier access to the paper while also being able to contribute to its growth and development (read more about the Bayan Post's interactive feature on Page 4). This new approach taken on by the Newsletter also aids the school in advocating for sustainability and conservation, as it takes advantage of the vast amount of technology we have at our disposal.

Here's to a wonderful year, Thank You!

- Editor-In-Chief, Zain Buhendi

DANIA'S FAREWELL SPEECH

Surviving through high school seemed like a dreadful, impossible task, which is why I'm still in disbelief that I can call myself a Bayan School graduate. As cliche as this sounds, I do look back fondly on the memories I made in this school (so long as they don't involve IB), many of which include the Bayan Post. As I'm embarking on a new journey at Northeastern University in Boston, I can't help but feel bittersweet departing from the Bayan Post community. Serving in the newsletter since freshman year and becoming the editor-in-chief in my senior year, this club has contributed towards my growth beyond the areas of writing and journalism. I have nurtured my leadership skills, became more proactive, and made new friends who I've grown to call my Bayan Post family.

For that, I extend my thanks to everyone who contributed towards this publication, from the dedicated writers to you, the readers. I would also like to thank our club supervisor, Ms. Mirna Madi, for her constant help and support. This communal effort truly made the Bayan Post the quality publication it is today. And of course, I congratulate this year's editor-in-chief.... Zain Buhindi! As one of our most dedicated writers, Zain, with her creative mind, will surely add a unique touch to this new chapter of the Bayan Post. Finally, I would like to remind you that, once a Bayanee, always a Bayanee... I might just make a reappearance sooner than you think... Until then, adios.

Bayan was not only a place where I got my education... Bayan is my home, my crib. Throughout my high school experience I have made several bonds with my teachers, friends, and other staff members and for that reason saying goodbye could not be harder. Bayan did not only teach me Math, English, Science, Arabic, and Social Studies, but it also taught me some of life's most essential lessons including humbleness, gratitude, and how to manifest my charitable character. Bayan has offered me many opportunities whether educational, communal, or global and therefore I am very proud to be a graduate of Bahrain Bayan School.

Dania Bin Huwail, former BP President, current face of the Northeastern homepage

I will forever cherish the memories I had spent in my 15 years in school as a Bayan student. I can't believe I'll say this, but I'll miss the crowded hallways, coming to school early and seeing each other's morning faces :D The years were tough but great, and also full of joyful and lively memories with students from different grade levels and teachers from diverse countries. Thank you to all my teachers from preschool until high school for their continuous love and support. Class of 2017: we finally made it!

What I look forward to most in my senior year is the memories and experiences I'll gain, and most importantly, finding a way to leave a mark for future members of the student body.

In my senior year, I look forward to immersing myself in all of the new opportunities that come with the future; applying to universities and exploring all the different places that I may attend next fall.

I am looking forward to the senior trip in Paris as it will be the last opportunity for all of us to spend time together and have fun in a beautiful destination.

For the past few years the Bayan Post has been a hub for talented writers to showcase their skills.

Unfortunately, the written works of all these writers were not read by many of the Bahrain Bayan School students. Therefore, in order to adapt with the times and attempt to reach out to more students, the entire newsletter is going digital. In order to commemorate this rebranding of the Bayan Post, this first issue will act as a tribute to the old editor, last year's seniors, and explain how exactly the Bayan Post will work.

By collaborating with the school's IT department, the Post has created a webpage that will go up on the school's website. Hopefully, this will inspire a more interactive atmosphere.

The website will be easy to use and readers will be able to find all they need in order to enjoy the newsletter. Keep posted for more updates on the website!
